About this book

The Southern Hills Athletic Conference was formed in the 1972 and the first boys SHAC track meet was held in 1973. In 1975 the league had the first girls meet. Since that time many changes has occurred. We converted to metric system as the 100-yard dash was replaced by the 100-meter run. Events were added such as the 800meter relay or 4x200, while other like pole vault were dropped from the meet schedule.

Schools in the SHAC has also changed. Georgetown and Western Latham were once in the SHAC. The SHAC name itself has changed as for many years the league was referred to as the Southern Hills League or SHL.

This book was compiled to preserve the track and field history of the SHAC league. It has been compiled from many sources. We believe that the information is accurate but please keep in mind there could be errors.

Listed in this book all the times for the various events in track and field. Some of the running events have changes such as the 100-yard dash was converted to meters. The hurdle events may have also changed as to number of hurdles and distance. The weights of the shot put and discus may also have changed over the last 50 year. We also converted from times measuring by a person using a stopwatch to timing races with a computer. This makes it difficult to compare John Wise’s 100 time in the early 1990s to Cody Hesler’s time in 2023.

FAT timing can make a huge difference in races that are 400 meters and shorter. For longer races greater than 400 meters hand timed races and FAT timed results are essentially the same providing that the individual person timing “catches the smoke”.

When did we start using FAT timing?

Fully Automatic Timing (FAT) officially became the mandatory standard for world records on January 1, 1977, marking the end of the hand-timing era in professional athletics. While experimental electronic systems surfaced as early as the 1912 Olympics, it took decades of refinement and the high-profile success of the 1968 Mexico City Games to prove that automated systems were necessary to eliminate human error. Because manual timers typically react slower than a machine, hand times are generally about 0.24 seconds faster than FAT results; by making FAT the official requirement, the sport ensured that records were based on objective, millisecond-perfect accuracy rather than the variable reflexes of a person with a stopwatch. The first FAT timed SHAC meet occurred in the spring of 2018.

How do you convert hand timed results to FAT times?

To convert a hand-timed track result to a fully automatic timing (FAT) equivalent, you first round the time up to the nearest tenth of a second and then add a standardized conversion factor—most commonly 0.24 seconds for sprints under 300 meters. This adjustment accounts for the inherent delay in human reaction time when starting a stopwatch upon seeing the starter's pistol. For longer races, the factor often decreases to 0.14 seconds (for 400m–799m) or 0.00 seconds (for 800m+), as the impact of the start becomes less significant over distance. While these converted times are essential for fair seeding in meets, they are generally used as estimates and are rarely accepted for official record-breaking purposes.
